WELCOME TO THE UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA, MORRIS

On behalf of the University of Minnesota, Morris faculty, students, and staff, I am pleased to take this opportunity to welcome parents, relatives, and friends of the 1976 UMM graduates. It is an honor and a pleasure to have you join with us in this important ceremony and to share the pride we feel for our graduates.

In reflecting upon the past year, it appears obvious to me that there has been an increase in the amount and the intensity of criticism directed toward American higher education and toward liberal arts education in particular. Much of the criticism attempts to be constructive and is motivated by a genuine concern over the quality of education provided in our institutions of higher education. It is argued that the dramatic increase in numbers of college-going students over the past few years has reduced the quality of education received by all. Lowered admission standards, grade inflation, and a general lessening of academic rigor and commitment have been cited frequently as evidence of this trend. Although there may be some validity to these charges, I do not feel that they are applicable to the University of Minnesota, Morris. Since our beginning in 1960, we have stressed the quality of our academic program. We have resisted the ever-present temptation to engage in programmatic proliferation and have instead concentrated upon devoting resources toward strengthening existing programs. As a result, the individuals who are receiving their degrees this evening have achieved a high measure of academic excellence.

In my judgment, our society today has a greater need for the contributions of liberal arts graduates than perhaps at any other time over the past two hundred years. An essential ingredient in a liberal arts education is the development of rational understanding. In working toward solving the many problems that confront our contemporary society, it is crucial that they be understood in terms of both depth and perspective. It is not enough to be for or against an issue because of its apparent effect on one person or on one or more groups of selected persons. Through the rigorous use of reason, an understanding of overall consequences must be achieved. A liberal arts education provides the background and the skills necessary to accomplish this difficult task.

It also seems apparent to me that the available employment opportunities for this year's graduates are more numerous, if only slightly so, than they were one year ago. As well as we at UMM can determine, the publicized absence of career choices for graduates of liberal arts colleges and of elementary and secondary education programs is simply not true. UMM graduates do obtain employment in fields that are directly related to their academic interests. Furthermore, their liberal arts experiences provide them with a degree of flexibility that is becoming less than common in our society today.

Again on behalf of the entire campus, warm and genuine congratulations are extended to each of you who are graduating. I hope that we have fulfilled your expectations to the same degree that you have met ours. We shall miss you.

John Q. Imholte, Provost

Oh, say can you see, by the dawn's early light,

What so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming,
Whose broad stripes and bright stars thro' the perilous fight,

O'er the ramparts we watched, were so gallantly streaming?

And the rocket's red glare, the bombs bursting in air,

Gave proof thro' the night that our flag was still there.

Oh say does that star-spangled banner yet wave

O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave?

A MOMENT OF SILENCE WILL BE OBSERVED.

SPEAKING FOR THE UNIVERSITY AND INTRODUCING GUESTS:

Academic Regalia

The pageantry and dress of American colleges and universities has been inherited from the medieval universities of the eleventh and twelfth centuries. Academic life as we know it today began in the Middle Ages, first in the Church, then in the guilds. The teaching guild was the Guild of the Master of Arts, where the Bachelor was the apprentice of the Master and the dress was the outward sign of privilege and responsibility.

Principal features of academic dress are the gown, the cap and the hood. Early it became necessary for universities to set rules to preserve the dignity and meaning of the academic dress. Both Cambridge and Oxford since the fifteenth century have made academic dress a matter of university control even to its minor details, and have repeatedly published revised regulations. American universities agreed on a definite system in 1895. In 1932 the American Council of Education presented a revised code which for the most part governs the style of academic dress today.

THE GOWN: The flowing gown comes from the twelfth century. While it originally may have been worn as protection against the cold of unheated buildings, today it has become symbolic of the democracy of scholarship for it covers any dress of rank or social standing underneath. It is black for all degrees with pointed sleeves for the Bachelors degree; long closed sleeves with a slit at the arm or wrist for the Masters degree; and full bell double sleeves for the Doctors degree. Bachelors and Masters degree gowns have no trimming. For the Doctors degree the gown is faced down the front with velvet and has three bars of velvet across the sleeves in the color distinctive of the faculty or discipline to which the degree pertains.

THE CAP: When Roman law freed the slave he won the privilege of wearing a cap. The academic cap is a sign of freedom of scholarship and the responsibility and dignity with which scholarship endows the wearer. Old poetry records the cap of scholarship as square to symbolize the book. The color of the tassel denotes the disciplines.

THE HOOD: The hood is trimmed with one or more chevrons of a secondary color on the ground of the primary color of the college. The color of the facing of the hood denotes the discipline represented by the degree, the color of the lining designates the university or college from which the degree was granted.

SHOULDER CORDS on the gowns of candidates for degrees indicate that the candidates are honor students.

The propriety and details of American colleges and universities has been inherited from the medieval universities of the church and twelfth century Academics. Its arrangement of today began in the Middle Ages, first in the Church, then in the public. The teaching hall was the Guild of the Master of Arts, where the Bachelor was the apprentice of the Master and the student was the outward sign of privilege and responsibility.

Original features of medieval dress are the gown, the cap and the hood. Even in modern universities to not rules to preserve the dignity and meaning of the academic dress. Both Cambridge and Oxford claim the fifteenth century when made academic dress a matter of university custom even to its minor details, and have separately published various regulations. American universities agreed on a definite system in 1890. In 1910 the American Council of Universities presented a national code which for the most part governs the style of academic dress today.

THE GOWN: The flowing gown comes from the fourteenth century. While it originally may have been worn as protection against the cold of unheated buildings, today it has become symbolic of the distinction of scholarship. It is flowing, with sleeves of even or wide standing collar. It is black for all degrees with colored sleeves for the Bachelor degree, long closed sleeves with a slit at the arm or wrist for the Master's degree, and full full flowing sleeves for the Doctor's degree. Bachelor and Master's degrees possess long narrow wings.
